Tokyo, July 2019

Subject: CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

Dear Sir/Madam,

We are pleased to send you our leaflets and request your cooperation in encouraging your most promising staff to apply for admission to our Master and Ph.D. programs.

Located in central Tokyo and sponsored by the Japanese government, the National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies (GRIPS) is a graduate school dedicated to educating future leaders in the public policy arena. It is one of the most international institutes in Japan and is designed to attract government officials from around the world.

GRIPS programs are taught entirely in English and offer promising early and mid-career professionals in the public sector and policy-oriented academia an opportunity to network and extend their knowledge in a wide range of topics concerning public policy and policy formulation. Scholarships are available for outstanding applicants.

Our programs start in October 2020. For application deadlines and procedures please refer to enclosed flier and the GRIPS website.

Your kind consideration would be highly appreciated.

We look forward to receiving applications from excellent candidates from your organization.

Sincerely yours,

Professor Mikitaka Masuyama
Executive Vice President and Dean
National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies

Message from the President

Profile

Akihiko Tanaka obtained his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1981 and has held various positions at the University of Tokyo, including Professor of International Politics, Director of the Institute of Oriental Culture, and Executive Vice-President. He served as President of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) from April, 2012, to September, 2015. Professor Tanaka's academic specialties include theories of international politics, development cooperation, contemporary international relations in East Asia, and Japanese foreign policy. In 2012, he received the Medal of Honor with Purple Ribbon (shiju hōshō) for his academic achievements. In April 2017, Professor Tanaka became President of GRIPS.

The National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies (GRIPS), a graduate school established in 1997, aims to contribute to the development and advancement of democratic governance both in Japan and abroad through research and education in governmental policy and policy reform. Since its inception as the Graduate School of Policy Science at Saitama University in 1977, GRIPS has conducted policy research relevant to the current affairs of Japan and the world and provided graduate education in advanced policy studies designed primarily for mid-career administrative and government officials from Japan and overseas, primarily from developing countries. GRIPS places particular emphasis on education for our international students; many of our degree programs can be obtained through study entirely in English.

GRIPS endeavors to produce young policy-makers who can tackle problems faced by countries, cities, international organizations, companies, and civic society at large. To that end, graduate education at GRIPS focuses on the fundamentals of policy research as well as practical problem-solving. Students benefit from high-quality instruction in economics, political science, public administration, international relations, engineering, and other subjects, and from the examination of selected case studies reflecting the experiences of Japan and other Asian countries related to modernization, rapid economic growth, and disaster management. In addition to high-quality graduate education, we offer training programs that meet the needs of various stakeholders including the government agencies of a wide array of countries; we also accept funded research that draws on our faculty's expertise.

GRIPS' current policy on education, research and management is strongly linked to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 2015. Our curriculum highlights the 17 goals of the SDGs: we work to raise the awareness and knowledge of the SDGs amongst our students—many of whom will go on to become future leaders of their countries. I am also keen on encouraging research that will contribute towards the achievement of the SDGs.

Currently, international students make up 60% of our student population. Even by global standards, we are a particularly international research and education institution. In this environment, international students have the opportunity to engage in friendly competition among themselves and with the people who will lead Japan in the future, whereas Japanese students have the chance to create bonds with those who will go on to be future leaders in their home countries around the globe.

GRIPS is centrally located in Tokyo and has extensive access to the Japanese government and its agencies and to other major stakeholders. This proximity allows our students to experience the core of Japanese policymaking as they perform their research.

The world in the 21st century faces a great number of urgent issues that require action on both national and international scales. These issues, reflected in the SDGs, impact on areas including economic development, security, the environment, overpopulation, inequality, and technological progress. I hope that you will choose to come to GRIPS and join us in addressing these global problems.

Akihiko Tanaka
President

Meet Policy Professionals from Around the World

Where are GRIPS Alumni working
(Graduated 2017)

Many students at GRIPS are mid-career personnel from central and local government, related institutions and private companies. About 60% of the student body is composed of international students from nearly 60 countries and regions, many of whom are administrative officials in their own countries.

Our students have diverse nationalities, cultures, and languages, but they are all dedicated policy professionals. GRIPS is an environment where Japanese and international students can address the same problems in the same classroom, thinking about future policy from a global perspective.

GRIPS attracts students from around the world in a variety of fields. Networks established during study are precious assets after graduation. Our graduates number over 4,500 and hail from 115 different countries and regions, including those from GRIPS's predecessor, the Graduate School of Policy Science (GPS) at Saitama University.

Center for Professional Communication

The mission of the Center for Professional Communication is to support GRIPS' students, faculty, and staff in developing effective professional communication skills and competencies needed to communicate productively in an environment of multiple stakeholders. To this end, we offer a range of instruction and support in fundamental areas of professional communication in English and Japanese including policy paper writing, professional speaking, grant proposal writing, and digital communications. We also provide opportunities for cultural and academic exchanges through a self-access learning center, organize seminars and special events related to all aspects of professional communication, and prepare customized materials for students and staff on academic and professional writing and language learning.

Focused Knowledge of Policy Studies

Located in Roppongi, Tokyo, the GRIPS campus is close to Nagatacho and Kasumigaseki, the political and administrative centers of Japan respectively, making it easy for current administrative officers and practitioners to visit. Through lectures, seminars, the GRIPS Forum and other events, students have the opportunity to deepen their knowledge of policy studies by hearing from top-class experts on the front lines of domestic and international academia, government, politics and industry.

Diversity and Depth of Teaching

Our faculty consists of leading scholars in policy studies from Japan and overseas, and highly gifted individuals with practical experience in government, international development and related fields. Together, they make a team of instructors with great diversity and depth. We have 70 full-time and many part-time professors to our approximately 400 students. The curriculum includes discussions and tutorial classes with a small number of students, alongside regular lectures. Instruction is closely attuned to the needs of the individual student.

Short-Term Executive Training

GRIPS has been providing various short-term training programs for government officials, particularly for senior executives, middle management level officials and public policy professionals. The Executive Development Center for Global Leadership (CGL) is a well-established center for executive training, which was launched in 2013. The center has been organizing many short-term training programs to meet specific requests.

» Subjects of Short-Term Executive Training Program include:

- Leadership Development and Management for the 21st Century
- Public Management in General
- Structures and Processes of Government
- Organizational Management
- Civil Service Systems and Human Resource Management
